Christmas Market

On Wednesday December 6th the Art Department are holding our annual Christmas Market in the café from 2.45 – 5.30pm. Alongside the stalls held by friends of the school community we would also like to invite any staff and student groups who would like to take part. Profits are kept by the stall holders with a donation to the charity MIND. If you are interested please contact me know and I can give you more details.

At 6.00pm that evening and on Thursday 7th, Mrs R Walker, Mrs K Patel and Mrs A Clarke are staging Little Shop of Horrors which involves a huge cast of pupils and our in house band. Family and friends are welcome. Tickets £2.00 on the door.

Thank you
Mrs L Avery

Design a Carshalton Boys Bank Note

The Economics department ran a competition for year 9 over half term to design a Carshalton Boys Bank Note during our topic of Money and the Bank of England. The designs had to include the characteristics of money including durability, not easy to counterfeit and representing the community they represent. The winning designs are pictured below and all the entries had such great detail, especially all the portraits of Mr Barber!

African Drumming Workshops

Year 8 students taking part in a West African drumming workshop with Mike Simpson from Inspire Works. 3 classes will be completing a virtual learning course over the next half term, culminating in a performance at the end. The students will also receive the Arts Award Level 1 certificate for completing the course.

Spooky Literacy Competition

This week for literacy, students in year 8 were required to write their own opening to a Halloween story. There were lots of entries and these were judged by Mrs S Tyson, Mr M Sadler and Mr P Lambert. After much deliberation the results were as follows:

3rd place= L Kunar (8S)

2nd place= 8W

1st place= C Insch-Gallacher (8R)

Here in the bulletin today is a copy of the story openings, enjoy reading students' entries.

I hated taking my little brother Trick or Treating at Halloween. He was only five so would get over excited when he ate too much candy, but always moan and cry that he felt sick. However, this Halloween, when we got to Mr Johnson's house on the corner of our street we were greeted with a big surprise.

The house had disappeared, my little brother dropped his candy, all that was left was his one rose. He said that he thought we were lost, yet it seemed different, as if it had a monster's face. A letter with a wax seal mark with a D, as we edged ever closer, there was a thud that set a tremor through the ground. As we turned to see what had made the noise, we couldn't believe our eyes when we saw moving skeletons, with lit pumpkins as heads. They growled and hunched as they advanced on me and my brother. We tried to run, but more skeletons blocked that way, I turned round to see our escape attempt was futile. They closed in closer and closer, as if to say we saw our brother vanish then everything went black....

I hated taking my little brother Trick or Treating at Halloween. He was only five so would get over excited when he ate too much candy, but always moan and cry that he felt sick. However, this Halloween, when we got to Mr Johnson's house on the corner of our street we were greeted with a big surprise.

His front door was already wide open, tempting us inside. Peeking in, we could see a massive bowl of brightly coloured sweets on the hall table, glistening like a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow! What should we do? We looked around, but old Mr Johnson was nowhere in sight.

Let's grab them and run! exclaimed my little brother bubbling with excitement and greed, grinning from ear to ear. We filled our pockets and stuffed loads into our mouths.

Oh no! We both let out a piercing scream! They were not sweets, they tasted like the vilest, slimmest, mouldiest rotten vegetable you could ever imagine. Just at that moment Mr Johnson jumped out from the door and laughed...

Ha ha! he giggled, spluttering and crying with laughter. Your turn for a trick this year, I think! We'd been had. We fled into the night like phantoms.

Year 11 Geography Field Trips

All year 11 geographers have spent a day at Juniper Hall Field Studies Centre & at various sites along & in the River Tillingbourne. The students enjoyed the days and got a lot out of them. Although it is a compulsory element of the course for their Paper 3, it also aided in good river landscapes revision (that they studied in year 9!) for their paper 1.

Thank you to Mrs S Barker, Mr P Brittain & Mr A Lever who helped out/drove minibuses over these 2 days.

Sutton Supremo's

This year's Sutton Supremo's are really taking advantage of every opportunity thrown their way this year. The Sutton Supremo's have had a jam packed week, starting the week off by attending DAY 1 of the Games Force Award course. This course has been designed to develop the students awareness of the skills required to be an effective leader when coaching invasion games such as rugby and football. The boys were very enthusiastic throughout the course and are excited to start their DAY 2 of the course later on in November.

Wednesday brought a new challenge for eight of the Sutton Supremo's, whom attended the Level 1 Badminton officiating course which was held at CBSC. The boys were joined by students from St Philomena's, all the boys worked well and developed their officiating skills both as an umpire, lines judge and scorer. All eight CBSC students passed the course with flying colours and are now looking forward to the next challenge over the next few months supporting both borough badminton competitions and the London Youth Games. Please congratulate the following students on passing their LEVEL 1 BADMINTION OFFICAL QUALIFICATION.
